More about me

After I graduated college, I knew I wanted to work with people, especially people who want to live fulfilling lives. I first noticed this on a personal level, as friends and family would come to me for advice or for me to listen to their struggles and provide comfort. Additionally, I am very passionate about helping others and listening to their specific needs and goals for everyone to succeed. I feel the best when I am striving to create positive changes in my community. I enjoy helping individuals with locating resources and guiding them in the right direction to meet their needs. I love meeting new people and like hearing their stories to get to know them even better. When working together with a participant, I will listen closely to their specific needs and pay close attention to the exact services they would like to have. My main goal is for participants to feel comfortable and safe with their lives. In my free time, I enjoy baking and cooking, being outdoors, and spending time with family and friends.
